

MARKET VIEW WEEKLY

Philip Blancato, Chief Market Strategist, Osaic

ECONOMIC REVIEW¹

- The monthly labor report was released on Thursday, a day early in front of the holiday, and pointed towards strength in the job market.
 - o Nonfarm payrolls rose by 147,000, which was well above consensus expectations, and in-line with the historic average.
 - Initial jobless claims rose 233,000, which was below expectations and signaled a drop from the previous reading as fewer people were filing for unemployment.
- The unemployment rate fell to 4.1%, a slight decline from May's reading of 4.2%.
 - However, this may be a product of a lower participation rate as fewer people in the workforce can lead to a lower unemployment figure.
- Average hourly earnings rose 3.7% year-over-year (YoY), and 0.2% month-over-month (MoM).
 - o This suggests higher wages are outpacing the rate of inflation, which is positive for consumers.
- The ISM Services Index, a survey of purchasing managers for services-based companies, which acts as a proxy for the health of the service sector rose above expectations to 50.8.
 - A reading above 50 signals expansion, while a reading below 50 suggests contraction.
- The increase in the ISM Services Index was marked by a rebound in new orders and business activity, both encouraging indicators that the elevated reading can be maintained going forward.

How does the most recent economic data impact you?

- The main driver of the economy has been consumer spending, which has largely been supported by steady job growth and rising wages.
 - The labor market coming out of the pandemic has continued to show resilience with no major signs of breakage, but rather a trend back to pre-pandemic averages.
- The service sector has been the primary source of spending for consumers, and its rebound in June provides an encouraging sign for the economy.

→ A LOOK FORWARD¹

- Investors will shift focus to the Federal Reserve's (Fed's) meeting minutes, which can provide more comprehensive insights into how the Federal Reserve Board members are viewing the economy.
 - The minutes can also provide more localized insights into consumer strength.

How does this week's slate of economic data impact you?

- After holding interest rates during the first half of the year, most market participants are expecting one or two rate cuts by year end.
- If inflation continues to ease in the coming months, current interest rate levels may become increasingly restrictive for the economy.

OBSERVATIONS

- Major U.S. stock indexes continued to push higher on the back of stronger than anticipated economic data in the shortened trading week.
 - The Russell 2000 Index led the advance with a +3.58% gain, followed by the Dow Jones (+2.34%), S&P 500 (+1.75%), and NASDAQ (+1.63%).
- This marked the second consecutive week that small caps returned over 2% and are now positive on the year.
- International markets rose slightly on the week, with developed markets up +0.05%, and emerging markets up +0.41%.
- International fixed income, and high yield indices were positive, but the U.S. Aggregate Bond Index dipped slightly as domestic interest rates rose marginally.

BY THE NUMBERS

- House Republicans Pass Trump's "Big Beautiful Bill" 3: House Republicans handed President Donald Trump his first legislative victory of his second term Thursday after overcoming resistance from a handful of members, passing a sweeping $3.4 trillion tax-and-spending package known as the "Big Beautiful Bill" that extends his 2017 tax cuts, provides a large funding boost for his immigration policies, and imposes deep cuts to Medicaid and other safety-net programs. The bill passed 218 to 214, with Reps. Brian Fitzpatrick of Pennsylvania and Thomas Massie of Kentucky as the only two Republicans to join all Democrats in opposition, sending the measure to Trump's desk a day before his self-imposed July 4 deadline. House Speaker Mike Johnson could only afford to lose three Republican votes given his party's slim majority in the chamber, but despite this the bill was ultimately passed.
- Flash Flooding in Texas Kills More Than 80 People 4: Flash floods in Texas killed at least 82 people over the Fourth of July holiday weekend and left others still missing, including girls attending a summer camp. The devastation along the Guadalupe River, outside of San Antonio, has drawn a massive search effort as officials face questions over their preparedness and the speed of their initial actions. The Texas Hill Country in the central part of the state is naturally prone to flash flooding due to the dry dirt-packed areas where the soil lets rain skid along the surface of the landscape instead of soaking it up. Friday's flash floods started with a particularly bad storm that dropped most of its 12 inches (30 centimeters) of rain in the dark early morning hours. Gov. Greg Abbott said Sunday that there were 41 people confirmed to be unaccounted for across the state and more could be missing.
